As you consider the Who, What, Where, When & Why of your information source, try imagining a dial - confidence boosting characteristics like an expert author or peer-review turn the dial up, while red flags like missing citations or typos turn it down.

It’s up to you to balance all of these attributes against one another and make your best judgment on what information to trust.